Eagle Mart

Thanks to you, students in the Cumberland Valley (CV) School District are seen, supported and given hope.

For Emily, a CV student at Eagle View Middle School, the opportunity began when her school counselor noticed she was wearing the same clothes day after day and hesitated to join group activities. Her family was navigating job loss and housing instability, and school started to feel like another place where she didn't feel comfortable.

Emily was referred to Eagle Mart, a free resource center the Eagle Foundation helps support, where students and families can pick out essentials like clothing, school supplies, and household items. With dignity and choice, Emily received what she needed to feel confident walking down the school hallways.

That summer, a scholarship from the Eagle Foundation allowed Emily to attend a cooking camp. She made friends, learned her way around the kitchen, and how to prepare several meals and snacks. Best of all, she could simply enjoy being a kid again.

Later that year, Emily's older sister joined a Foundation-sponsored college visit for first-generation college-bound students and walked around a campus for the first time.

For other students, support looks like a free lunch during summer ELD (English Language Development) classes or a grocery store gift card to help their family buy detergent and groceries for dinner. Thanks to you, CV students don't face these challenges alone.

The Eagle Foundation works side-by-side with CV staff to identify students like Emily and provide meaningful resources and opportunities. We can't do it without you.

▶▶▶▶ "For many of our students, these college visits are eye-opening," said Leigh, a CV High School Counselor. "They begin to see that college isn't just for someone else. It's for them, too."
